Dear Miss Ibendahl -

It is a pleasure for me to present to the Perry County Historical Society a copy of my small book PIONEER AND RELATED FAMILIES OF RANDOLPH AND PERRY COUNTIES, ILLINOIS. This work represents many years of study and research, and I hope it may prove to be of interest to several of your members. I shall appreciate the favor if you will advise them that I hope to obtain further knowledge of the families here mentioned and I shall appreciate all additional knowledge or corrections of the many errors which I am sure must be present.

One hundred copies of this book were published, the cost of publication alone being $6.00 per copy. I have several copies on hand and shall be glad to furnish them to any interested person at that price.

With all good wishes for the success of your Society, I am

Sincerely yours,

Robert C. Robertson M. D.

SPARTA (RANDOLPH COUNTY), ILLINOIS
whose family research inspired this volume.

INTRODUCTION

In 1922, while I was a medical student in Chicago, my late cousin, Nellie Kathleen (6) Steele of Sparta, Illinois, wrote me regarding records of the Steele family. The Newberry Library contained much material of value, although the period and places we were searching were among those in which records are scattered and incomplete. For these reasons it was necessary to visit old cemeteries, search county courthouse records, and contact various elderly members of the family. Results were slow and uncertain. The data we compiled proved so interesting that we enlarged our searches to include all of our lines of descent. Professional genealogists were engaged from time to time with varying degrees of success. The late J. B. Dodge of St. Louis, who for many years was a student and historian of early Illinois history and pioneer families in the southern counties of the state, furnished much information which could not be obtained elsewhere. With removal to another state, a busy private practice, long absence during World War II, the death of Cousin Nell and separation from large genealogical libraries, the hours available for further study have been all too few and non-productive.

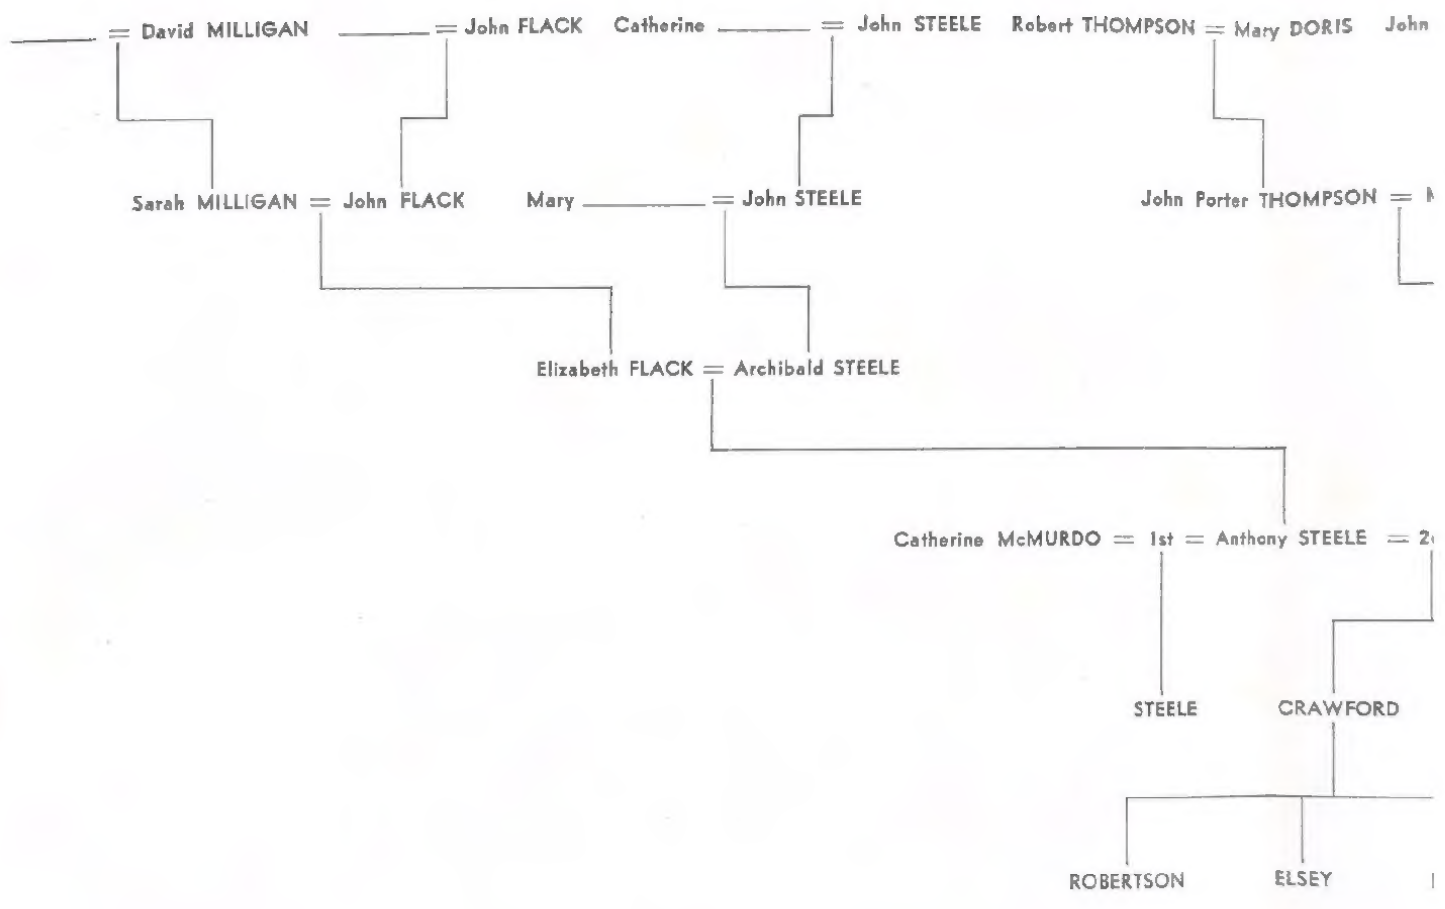

Each one of us is but the sum of his ancestry and his yesterdays. It is felt that the data collected over the years warrants publication for preservation within the various related families, as the passage of time with further loss of written records and the passing on of elder members with their knowledge of earlier generations, renders impossible even now the duplication of much of this material. I deeply regret that I am unable to obtain recent records of the Campbell and Thompson families.

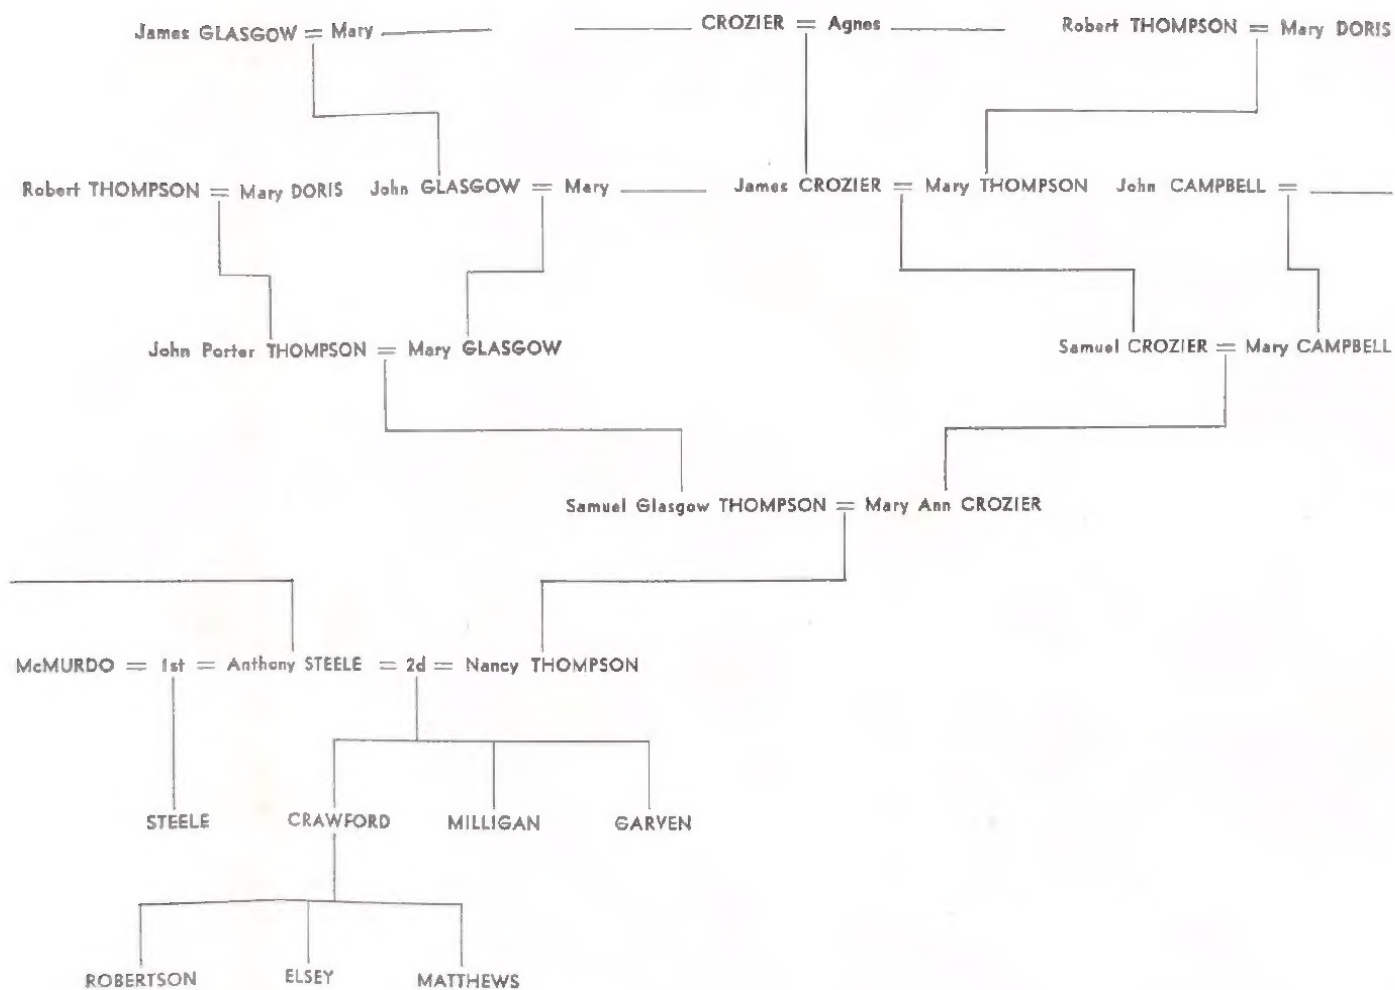

To the many members of the various families who responded to letters of inquiry I shall always be grateful. For the incompleteness of this work and the many inaccuracies which I am sure must be present, I most humbly apologize.

It is my hope that this small volume will prove interesting to all who descend through one or more of the families here included, that the attainments of our sturdy ancestors long before the days of our present welfare state will stimulate greater self reliance and independence in each of us in our daily lives, and that one or more of the readers may be inspired to complete these fragmentary records.

CAMPBELL

The origin of this name is not clearly established, although it is of great antiquity in Scotland, and occurs frequently in Scottish history. Colin Campbell of Lochow distinguished himself by his military abilities and was knighted by King Alexander the Third in 1280. In 1291 he was one of the nominees of Robert Bruce in the contest for the Scottish crown. In 1445, Sir Duncan Campbell was made Lord Campbell and in 1457 his grandson, Colin Campbell, was created 1st Earl of Argyle. In 1701 Archibald Campbell the 10th Earl of Argyle was created 1st Duke of Argyle, a title still within the family.

The immigrant who established our branch of the family in this country is unknown.

CROZIER

This name is of French origin, signifying "Makers of Crosses," "Bishop's Staff," or "Shepherd's Crook." It is not uncommon in south central France. The Scottish branch of the family were probably transported northward at the time of the first crusade, and settled on the banks of the Liddell in Scotland. On February 3, 1314, Wilhelmus Crozier became the first Professor of Philosophy in the University of Scotland. William Crozier, Chief of the Clan, with his three sons—John, Samuel and William—emigrated to County Down, Ireland, about the middle of the seventeenth century. In 1692 he purchased of Sir John Mac Gill an estate called Langham, near Guilford; and another estate called Drumorun. The name of Langham was changed to Strathmore.

On 27 Feb., 1767, Agnes (1) CROZIER, a recently arrived immigrant from North Ireland, a widow and head of a family, was granted 150 acres of land in Abbeville County, S. C., each of her children receiving additional grants of 100 acres. It is unknown whether her husband died at sea enroute to the Colony, or whether he died in North Ireland prior to their departure. Her maiden name is unknown.

STEELE

The name STEELE or STEEL is thought to be of ancient Danish origin, derived from the name Staal, meaning strong or hard. It occurs on ancient records in England as Staal, Stel, Stele, Steell, Steel and Steele. Among early records of the family bearing this name are Robert Stele of Lincolnshire in 1273; John Stel of Suffolk Co. about the same time; and Johannes Stele of Yorkshire in 1379.

Randolph County, Illinois, histories state that this branch of the family were Scotch-Irish and came to the colonies from North Ireland. The late Henry B. (5) STEELE stated that in his youth he often studied the family Bible records—since destroyed by fire—and that the immigrants were John Steele, his wife, Catherine _____, and son, John—then 17 or 18 years of age—who came to South Carolina from England about 1755, and that John and Catherine died in South Carolina. The late Robert D. (5) STEELE also stated that the family came to this country from England. Until further evidence is obtained these statements must be accepted. Early records are incomplete and scattered in North and South Carolina, Tennessee and Virginia. Documentary evidence of residence has not been found in any of these states.

*1. John (2) b: abt. 1737, in England; d: 11 Sept., 1820, nr. present town of Steeleville (Randolph Co.) Ill.; m: Mary _____, b: Dec., 1757; d: 18 May, 1819, nr. present town of Steeleville. He lived in Virginia for an unknown time, and served as Captain of a Company of Virginia troops during the War of the American Revolution. (See Revolutionary Soldiers Buried in Illinois and Co. Histories.) Service records of the War of the Revolution and the War of 1812 are very incomplete. The Adjutant General's office has no record of his military service. His name does not appear in the Bureau of Pensions, nor in the General Land Office records. Following the end of the war, he with his family moved from Virginia to Tennessee; where they lived successively in or near Knoxville, Nashville, and Sumner County. In 1807 he again moved with his family to Randolph County, Ill., and was the first permanent white settler in the vicinity of the present town of Steeleville. Montague states "He possessed a remarkable degree of self reliance and courage—A man of sterling worth, a noble speciman of the Pioneer."

THOMPSON

About 1763 Robert THOMPSON, wife Mary Doris, and children emigrated from North Ireland to Abbeville County, S. C. He was a farmer and blacksmith. Because of active aid given the Colonial forces during the War of the American Revolution, his blacksmith shop and farm were repeatedly raided by the Tories, who in 1779 burned the home, blacksmith shop and crops, and destroyed the fences. At least one son served with South Carolina troops during this war.

With younger brother, Samuel Glasgow THOMPSON, he moved to Randolph Co., Ill., in 1814, settling first in Kaskaskia where he taught school for three years, later moving nr. the present town of Evansville where he developed a farm. Farmer, Surveyor and Judge; Randolph Co. Commissioner 1820, County Surveyor 1821, Captain of Militia 1822, Judge of the Probate Court 1831-48. A noted County and United States Surveyor, he was selected in 1830 by the three trustees of the Illinois and Michigan Canal Commission to make the original survey of the Canal; to plot Chicago on the northern end, and Ottawa, Ill., at the southern end. Chicago (then Fort Dearborn) as surveyed by him was three eighths of a mile square along the banks of the Chicago River, bounded by State, Des Planes, Kinzie & Madison Streets. He named Randolph, Washington, Franklin, Jefferson and Clinton Streets after his home or nearby counties, while Clark Street he named for Gen. George Rogers Clark, the hero of Kaskaskia. The seven families residing there lived within the limits of the military reservation, which was not included in the survey. By family tradition he scorned payment for this service in city lots, but requested and obtained as payment a well-bred mare which he admired. This animal later became a well-known brood mare on his farm in Randolph County. In 1917 the City of Chicago dedicated a monument to him in the Preston Cemetery, Randolph Co., Ill. A Captain in the 3rd Regiment, 3rd Brigade, Illinois Mounted Volunteers in Black Hawk War (1832), the roster of his company included the following kinsmen—Corporals Archibald Crozier and James Thompson; Privates Andrew Crozier, James Milligan, Absolom McBride, James and George Steele. The late J. B. Dodge of St. Louis, Mo., a historian and student of early Southern Illinois history wrote me "I once worked on his farm, and remember many stories about him. Once while a teacher, he was challenged to a duel by the father of a student he had thrashed. He accepted, and as the challenged party specified as weapons very tight boots to be worn by both parties, and for position that they stand ten paces apart and kick vigorously at each other, thereby living to become wiser men and better friends. His terms brought such derision to the challenger that it did much to discredit the spirit of dueling in Randolph Co."

*4. Samuel Glasgow (3) b: 7 Apr., 1799; d: 30 Jan., 1851, nr. Evansville, (Randolph Co.) Ill.; m: 23 Dec., 1819, in Randolph Co., Ill., Mary Ann Crozier, b: 24 Aug., 1797, in Abbeville Co., S. C.; d: 5 May, 1853, nr. Evansville. (See CROZIER—4). With his elder brother, James THOMPSON, he moved to Randolph Co. in 1814, settling in Kaskaskia. Farmer, Surveyor and County Official. Served as county surveyor and in the United States surveying service for many years. Captain in the 2nd Regiment Illinois Militia 1821-24, Justice of the Peace 1823 and 1835, Treasurer of Randolph Co. 1824, School Commissioner 1833, Superintendent of Schools 1840, Representative of Randolph Co. in the State Legislature 1836-8. Letters written from Vandalia (then State Capital) to his wife, then living in Kaskaskia, Ill., in Feb., 1837, give interesting sidelights on the customs of the times. One reads in part:

"I can truly say that I am tired of the busy scenes of a public life. My ambition and curiosity are fully satisfied. . . . We are progressing yet but slowly in legislative business. . . . The internal improvement bill has again been called up and much angry debate had thereon, which has thrown the members into much confusion. . . . On Sunday evening last Col. Field of Vandalia, and Murry McConnel met at the grocery . . . they were soon in a passion. Field drew his dirk, but before he could use it McConnel brought him to the floor with a chair. . . . On Monday evening Mr. Linder and Mr. Riley, one a senator, the other a representative, met at the barber shop. After a few words, which originated on the propriety of the passage of this bill and other matters, Linder drew his pistol, and fired on Riley, the pistol being loaded with slugs and held so near Riley's breast they did not penetrate his skin to do much injury. . . . I have so far been treated with respect and friendship by every person with whom I have become acquainted. . . . I have learned many useful lessons, which I think will be profitable to me for the future. One of these I will mention now, the others when I see you . . . when a man is doing well at home with his family, he had better stay there, if he is an honest man."

Excerpts from another:

"I am still of the opinion that we will adjourn, either on the 27th or 28th of this month . . . Therefore I hope you will send a horse for me. . . . Should my horse come you may expect me home on Friday the 3rd day of March. . . . It is unnecessary that I should enter into a detail of our proceedings, it would only be perplexing and uninteresting. Suffice it to say, that the acts and doings of this legislature is calculated to bring down the curses of God and man upon a majority of the members thereof."

CRAWFORD

According to Anderson "Crawford, Crauford or Craufurd is a surname derived from the barony of Crawford in Lanarkshire, (Scotland) of which the origin is unknown.

"The family of Crawford is of undoubted Norman origin. The site of the ruins of Crawford Castle is still called Norman Gill, and the early names of this family are all pure Norman. In 1127 there were two brothers of this name, knights, sons most probably of Reginald, namely Sir John Crawford and Sir Gregan Crawford, both in the service of King David the First."

Major branches of the family later developed in Ayrshire and in Renfrewshire. Crawford is a lowland clan.

William Crawford of Crawfordsburn, near Toowoomba, Queensland, Australia, compiled and published the descendants of Hugh Crawford from Kilbirnie, Ayrshire, Scotland, the first known progenitor of this branch of the family. Registers of Kilbirnie prior to 1688 are not extant, and attempts to establish the ancestry of Hugh through researches in Scotland, have been unsuccessful.

The children of William (4) Crawford and Ester Canning were left orphans when the eldest child was only 15 years of age. A member of a neighboring family who had earlier emigrated to the United States returned to Ireland to assist in the disposal of the ancestral farm, and to bring the children to this country. The farm was sold to the kinsman William (5) Crawford who emigrated to Australia in 1861. The children under the protection of their friend, emigrated to the United States on 12 Oct., 1848, where their funds were exchanged into U. S. currency by their protector. Very shortly thereafter he advised them that their money had been stolen from him, and that they were penniless. They were brought by him to Coulterville (Randolph Co.) Ill., where they obtained such work as was available in their new home, the older girls mothering the younger children until the time that they became independent.

ELSEY

The name is of Danish origin. The first of record in England is Swajne Ulci who landed in what is now Lincolnshire during a Viking invasion about 620 A.D. He acquired considerable land, some of which is still occupied by the family. The name appears as Ulci, Ulsi, Alsi, Elsi and Elsey. The name Elsi appears nineteen times in the Domesday Book (Charles Gowan Smith translation, 1870) among the names of those who held land in Lincolnshire at the time of Edward the Confessor (1042-1066) but disappears in 1066 at the time of the Norman Conquest. The first to use the modern spelling was Thomas Elsey of Low Toynton, Lincolnshire in 1693.

ROBERTSON

The name of a Highland clan, called in Gaelic the clan Donnachaidh (Children of Duncan), of which Robertson of Strowan in Perthshire is the chief. Anderson states "Skene, however, in his History of the Highlanders, traces them from Duncan, King of Scotland, eldest son of Malcolm III, their immediate ancestor being Conan, second son of Henry, fourth and last of the ancient Celtic Earls of Atholl. . . . From his son, Robert Riach (grizzled), who succeeded him, the clan derive their name of Robertson. This Robert was noted for his predatory incursions into the Lowlands, and is historically known as the chief who arrested and delivered up to the vengeance of the government, Robert Graham and the master of Atholl, two of the murderers of James I, for which he was rewarded with a crown charter, dated in 1451, erecting his whole lands into a free barony. He also received the honourable augmentation to his arms of a naked man manacled under the achievement, with the motto, Virtutis gloria merces. He was mortally wounded in the head . . . in a conflict with Robert Forrester of Torwood, with whom he had a dispute regarding the lands of Little Dunkeld. . . . He had three sons: Alexander, Robert and Patrick. . . . The force which the Robertsons could bring into the field was estimated at 800 in 1715 and 700 in 1745."

The immigrant who established this branch of the family in our country was Robert, second son of William ROBERTSON and Jeanette McKirday who lived and died in Scotland. He visited America in 1841, returned to Scotland where he married, and in 1849 emigrated to Randolph Co., Ill., purchasing a farm near Sparta.
